

Sheffield Jottings News in a Nutshell

The Sheffield Fire Brigade is seriously considering the question of substituting a motor fire engine for the engines drawn by horses. The success of the motor fire escape so marked that the other is bound to follow.

The horse is also likely to be turned out of its ambulance work, and a writer to-day suggests that before all the horses go from fire and ambulance departments photographs should be taken for preservation in the Weston Park Museum to show how things were done in 1908.
